Loft9 Consulting Launches in Puget Sound Area

01.04.10

SEATTLE – Loft9, LLC, a professional services firm specializing in project coordination and business analytics, today announced the opening of its first practice serving the greater Puget Sound area.

The firm, started by two veterans of the consulting industry, Edward Beals and Mark Birzell, realized an opportunity to provide a greater experience for clients in the project coordination and business analytics space. While some professional services firms deliver similar services, clients have been consistently underserved, evidenced by inconsistent quality and a lack of employer oversight. Loft9 elevates beyond obstacles and lands superior outcomes for clients, while offering recruits an opportunity to be a part of a firm focused on exceeding client expectations and ongoing professional development.

Loft9's launch announcement comes at a time when many businesses are making reductions or just now stabilizing from the effects of the 2008-2009 recession. Despite the downturn, Loft9 co-Founder Mark Birzell sees opportunity, "In a time when businesses are trying to do more with less and everything counts, Loft9 offers clients immediate access to increased bandwidth by providing talented business professionals that can help land results that matter."

The firm is actively hiring and has already begun delivering for local clients. The average Loft9 associate has 3-5 years of relevant project coordination or business analytics experience. All associates are currently certified or required to become PMP or Six Sigma certified. More information about the firm can be found at www.loft9consulting.com
